

Pet cancer 101

What every pet family should know to help detect cancer earlier.

Warning signs of pet cancer

Watch your pet for subtle changes and talk to your veterinarian if you notice anything off.

- Changes in appetite or difficulty eating
- Lumps or sores that won't heal
- Limping or exercise intolerance
- Aversion to touch
- New anxiety or aggression
- Accidents or blood in the stool or urine
- Coughing or difficulty breathing

Questions to ask after a cancer diagnosis

Asking these questions can help guide your decision-making for treatment and care.

- What type and stage of cancer is this?
- What are the treatment options and frequency?
- What are the home care requirements?
- How will this impact my pet's quality of life?

When it comes to cancer, the only right decision is the one that's best for you and your pet.

Coverage you can count on

When Mylo was diagnosed with an aggressive form of lymphoma, Nationwide® made access to advanced treatment options a financial possibility for his family.

“

Nationwide has honestly made it much easier— if you can even say 'easy' during a cancer journey.

– Lisa S. and Mylo, protected by Nationwide since 2019
